PATIENT INFORMATION SHEET FOR EMG

You are scheduled to have a test called electromyography (EMG). This test measures electrical activity in your nerves and muscles. The information it provides gives us clues about nerve and muscle disorders.

We use the EMG to help us determine the cause of problems such as muscle weakness, spasm, numbness, paralysis, and pain in the arms, hands, legs, feet and face.

On the day of your test please do the following:

- ❖ Eat your regular meals
- ❖ Continue taking any medications you usually take
- ❖ If you are taking MESTINON for myasthenia gravis please call us
- ❖ Take a shower or bath, being sure to remove any body oils
- ❖ Do not use any bath oils, lotions or creams

AT THE DENT NEUROLOGIC INSITUTE:

Please register at the reception desk. A technician will take you to an exam room, explain the test in detail to you, and ask you to put on a hospital gown.

Please feel free to ask the technician any questions you may have.

THE EMG EXAMINATION:

The length of time that an EMG takes can vary from person to person, depending on what is involved and what information is sought.

In general, the test consists of two parts and last from one hour to one and a half hours. The first part of the test involves nerve conduction studies. While you are lying down, the technician will place small stick-on recording tabs to your skin. The nerves will be stimulated on the skin and the response will be measured. The sensation caused by the stimulation has been compared by some patients to a slap or rubber band hitting them.

Following the nerve conduction studies, the technician will remove the recording tabs and the physician will administer the second part of the test. While you are lying down, a small, thin, flexible, sterile disposable needle will be inserted into the muscles that will be tested. Nothing is injected through it. The physician will then measure the muscle's electrical activity.

You will be asked to relax and contract the muscle while it is being assessed. The more relaxed you are, the easier the test will be. We will try to make you as comfortable as possible.

AFTER THE TEST:

Following the test you may get dressed and go home. The EMG physician will gather the data from your test and have a report sent to your physician. Your doctor will let you know the results of your test.

You may have some minor soreness in the muscles tested for several days following the exam. Mild analgesics such as Tylenol can be used, but usually are not necessary.

If you have any questions or need further information, please do not hesitate to ask us at (716)250-2000.
